Wet your hair with lukewarm water to open your hair cuticles (unless it is a Dry Shampoo). Place a quarter sized amount of shampoo in the palm of your hands. Work up a good lather in your hands. Apply the shampoo to the back of your scalp and work your way forward vigorously in a massage motion for thirty seconds not forgetting the side burn area. (In grooming, many people neglect the back of their hair.) Rinse your hair with lukewarm water for thirty seconds.

Keep in mind that soft water shower heads as well as shower filters are best to use on your hair.

Should you repeat? If your hair is oily, you can repeat the process above. Keep in mind that a shampoo will lather up better the second time around, however, shampoos do not need to generate lather in order to be effective.
